Deceive is an open-source application, which is why it can be used and modified freely by anyone in the sourceforge repositories. There is no official version of Deceive for Android yet, so there is no official download link available. If you want to install Deceive on Android, you'll have to use Android's source code, which can be found here. Instructions Launch the app Deceive will check for updates automatically, you can also manually check if a new version is available for download. The last time I checked the app (with 1.9.1) was out of date, and it kept connecting to the Internet for a few days before the update was released, as it downloaded, cached, and began using the latest version. Exiting Deceive will always close the League of Legends client as well. Set your status The first time you launch Deceive, you'll be prompted to set your gaming status. Here you can choose "Online" or "Offline". If you are already online, everything is fine. It won't disconnect you from the game in any way. If you want to appear offline to your friends, then you'll have to set the gaming status to "Offline", and you'll need to log out from the client, and return with your browser to a site that will let you log in and look online. You'll need a website that can handle you logging in or connecting to the internet. If you don't have a free account at a site that does that, you can sign up here and get a free month or two. Make it seem like you have a connection If you have set your status to "Offline", you won't be able to connect to League of Legends using your own client. Deceive will open the League client automatically for you, which should appear offline to your friends. If you've set your status to "Online", then 09e8f5149f

So, You Want to Be a BotA (Assassin/Assasin)? So, You Want to Be a BotA? Well, I was recently asked by a very good friend "what is it that you do?". He didn't know and was asking because he was trying to find out what to do with his life and had thought that I might have some answers. The first question was "what are you?". Answer: Designer of text based and instant messaging based UIs. 2nd Question: "And what does that mean?". Answer: "The title says it all". The point is that I wasn't able to really explain to him what I do in a very simple manner so I decided to post what I do on the internet for everyone to read and think about. Getting back to the original question, what does my friend do? He studied Computer Engineering and now works for a very well known software company. He designs both complex and simple software as well as user interfaces. His work is based on his interest in staying up to date with everything that is new and interesting and his love for the above mentioned title. Some say that he is a bit "solar-powered" but that is not what matters. The important part is that he is interested in what is new, right now, right here. The only question was, why him?

Functional specialization of the dorsal lateral geniculate nucleus in magnocellular and parvocellular processing. Neurons in the dorsal lateral geniculate nucleus (LGN) of macaque monkeys were recorded and filled intracellularly following tracer injections in the superior colliculus. The collicular cortex, as well as the dorsolateral part of the superficial layers of the LGN, contained mainly magnocellular neurons. Ipsilateral pyramidal cells were also recorded in the deep layers, and these were exclusively magnocellular. A small proportion of the pyramidal cells in these two cell classes were also parvocellular. The magnocellular neurons could be further divided into large or small cells based on soma size. Large magnocellular neurons with regular-spiking or low-threshold spike (LTS) characteristics were found only in layers V and VI.
