XP Home Permissions Manager

XP Home Permissions Manager is a software which can be used to manage permissions of files and folders. It is easy to use and it can be added to the Start menu with an.exe extension. XP Home Permissions Manager is free software. XP Home Permissions Manager Version: XPS is a freeware system shell developed by Microsoft for use with the Windows XP operating system. It is optimized for use with Windows XP for the x86 family of processors. It was first released as part of Windows XP Service Pack 2 (SP2). It was originally a proprietary software, but is now made available as freeware. XP System shell is the original user interface of Windows XP. XPS is available for use on both 32-bit and 64-bit versions of Windows XP, as long as those versions of Windows XP are Service Pack 2 or later. XP System Shell is also available for use on Windows Server 2003 and later, Windows Vista, Windows 7, Windows 8, Windows 8.1, Windows RT, and on the Xbox One operating system. XP Shell is a user interface shell that runs the Start menu and programs of Microsoft Windows XP Professional. It is the default shell used when booting Windows XP and Windows 2000. Microsoft released it to Windows XP users as a free download. The "Advanced Settings" button is a file open dialog used by the Shell.exe tool in Windows. This dialog can be used to open and edit files and folders. The Shell will locate a file or folder if the dialog is left empty or if "Open" is selected. XPS (XP Shell), is an enhanced, alternative shell to Windows XP's default Windows shell which was originally developed for use with Windows XP Service Pack 2 (SP2) and later. Later, XPS became the default Shell for Windows XP (SP2) and later, after Microsoft released Windows XP Service Pack 3 (SP3) with the "XP Shell" icon on the Windows XP Start menu. In Windows Vista and later, the default shell of Windows XP is changed to the Windows shell (Winlogon). This add-on for Windows XP allows user to easily edit the list of folders in the Start menu, and is inspired by the desktop customizations of XP Professional. Its editor is an open file dialog that opens when user right-clicks on any folder in the Start menu, and allows the user to add or edit any individual folder in the Start menu. User interface

This extension adds a Security property page to Properties page of any object it is applied to. This property page provides a graphical user interface to manage access permissions to files, folders, etc. An access restriction is added to a selected object by clicking on the + button in the Security property page. The restriction is added by clicking on the "Access" radio button in the Security property page. A corresponding check box is added to the Property page. The restriction can be removed by clicking on the - button in the Security property page. Other Windows Security properties pages: - "Security" property page (Windows 2000 and Windows XP) - "Security Tab" (Windows NT/2000/XP) - "Security & Maintenance" (Windows NT/2000/XP) Files: - cacls.exe (Windows XP Home) Please Note: Although you can change permissions on the folder level, you cannot change permissions on the file level. You can only assign permissions to files and folders at the folder level. At the time of writing of this manual page, permissions for the following objects are supported: * Files * Folders * Directories File/Folder Permissions: Using the cacls.exe command-line utility (included with Windows), you can remove access permissions from a file/folder and grant access permissions to yourself. * To remove access permissions from the object cacls -h -s /path/to/object * To remove permissions from anyone else cacls -h -x /path/to/object * To remove everyone's access permissions cacls -h -e /path/to/object * To grant access permissions to yourself cacls -h -u you -s /path/to/object * To grant access permissions to anyone else cacls -h -u you -x /path/to/object * To grant everyone's access permissions cacls -h -A /path/to/object * To grant the permissions you specify cacls -h -A -u you -s /path/to/object * To grant the permissions you specify cacls -h -A -u you -x /path/to/object For more details, see the cacls command documentation. Imports: SecurityTab This extension adds a SecurityTab to the Security property page. It adds a tab named "Security" to the properties page, with a dialog box displaying a list of security properties for all selected objects. Clicking on a security property in the list updates the properties for the selected objects. The dialog box displays a button to allow the user to add the selected properties to all objects. This extension adds a SecurityTab to the Security property page. It adds a tab named "Security" to
