This deficiency is a serious handicap because neurobiologists need to know how the brain generates its response, the way in which these signals arrive at the sensory structures, and the way in which they convey information to the central nervous system. The objective of this application is the application of the neurophysiological and anatomical techniques established in this laboratory to the study of isolated nerve fibers from sensory structures of the macaque, particularly afferent fibers from somatosensory or special somatic receptors, and comparison of their properties with those of afferent fibers of similar appearance from the spinal cord.Martin: I would say the thing that I think has changed about the markets and technology to disrupt them is just scale. If you look at, say, the mortgage industry in the early 2000s, it was all about the bundling of these things together. We now have hundreds of different kinds of mortgages, and each of them is getting remade. And when you have hundreds of different kinds of mortgages, you
